SCOREBOARD

SLEIGH RIDE

Mrs. Pauline Ellison was driving down an icy highway in Richmond, Indiana when she crashed into a truck and was thrown from her car. Somehow she managed to land on her briefcase, skid two-hundred feet seated on its top, and walk away uninjured.

ONCE BURNED

The following advertisement appeared in the classified section of the Los Angeles Times: "SINGLE expectant mother desires housework or baby sitting. No bachelor considered."

ARREST ASSURED

Driver Ernst Baker crashed into a bus in Swinton, England, blinked twice, then sat dumfounded as he saw twelve uniformed policemen scrambling out to book him for careless driving.

WORM TURNS

William J. Powell, thirty-one, of Chicago averted five divorce suits filed by his wife by agreeing to: 1) turn over his entire paycheck to her, 2) change from night shift to day shift because she was lonely, 3) attend the church of her religion, 4) give up watching television because it bothered her when she read, 5) give up bowling and golf. But, alas, his wife filed for a divorce again and he was told that this time he must give up beating her.

COP RESPONDENCE

Pedestrians in San Bernardino, California were amused by a card bearing an exchange of messages stuck on the windshield of an illegally parked car. It read: "Dear Officer, I ran out of gas and money, too," followed by "Dear Citizen, I'll give you an hour to earn some money and buy some gas."

CONTAGIOUS COMMODITY

Police in Senago, Italy finally caught up with Alfonso Marie Donadio, thirty-seven, wanted for posing as a physician specializing in Asian flu and collecting an estimated $160,000 in fees. They found him snuggled up in bed—with Asian flu.

REFINED WILDERNESS

"In answer to many requests," announced the Modern Beauty Salon in Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, it will be open on Friday nights to men only.

WORM OF ART

In Los Angeles, Donald K. Hoster entered a painting in the All-City Outdoor Art Festival. He was rejected when officials learned that it was painted by a dozen angleworms dipped in oils and allowed to slither over the canvas.

DEMOCRACY SIMPLIFIED

The Miami Herald carried an article clarifying for readers an intricately phrased resolution on rezoning a strip of beach front. It was pointed out that if they were against it, they should pull the lever marked for, and if they were for it, to pull the lever marked against.

SMOKE GOT IN HIS EYES

A man went into a Detroit store and handed the owner 498 packages of cigarettes and fifty cents. He then explained that he had stolen 500 packs, but had repented after smoking two.

A black and white photograph of actress Claudine Hagen. She is shown from the waist up, leaning forward with her head tilted back and looking directly at the camera. She has short, dark, wavy hair and is wearing a strapless garment. The background is slightly out of focus, showing what appears to be a bathroom setting with a bathtub and some decorative items.

VICE HUNGRY HOUSEWIVES AND THEIR PLAY-FOR-PAY HOUSE OF LOVE

When overheated amateurs get into the call girl act, they're bound to end up as millionaires or in jail. For no matter what they lack in experience, they more than make up in enthusiasm!

by BRANDON MALONE

IT'S EASY TO get to; simple to find. Most anyone in the know within a fifty mile radius of the place can give you full and complete directions. Follow them. You can't go wrong. And a little while later you'll find yourself standing outside a sprawling, well-kept building, looking for all the world like a French Chateau dwelling of some fabled millionaire. Stare at it. That's about all that most of you can do—unless . . .

It isn't money that'll get you inside that big front door—though money won't hurt. It isn't social position—though that'll definitely help. Basically you need one of two items of interest—an introduction or a rep.

The introduction is quite the simpler thing to get. Most of the hotels and night spots around town have someone on the staff who can make contact. Even at the prices they charge it takes a large and steady flow of customers to keep the place in operation. So long as you can prove you have the entrance fee and can be trusted, you can make out. It may take time, but it's worth it.

The rep? Now that's another story. If you can offer something new, something tricky, something designed to bring out a brand new form of pleasure, that place is yours—for free. If you're good enough, they'll even pay you to learn your secret. For that's their one and only business, pleasure.

Because this is the story of the biggest, wildest, most uninhibited pleasure palace in America. Staffed by amateurs, run by pros, it offers every sex-joy known to the human race—all for a price. Whether you're man or woman, looking for the simplest kicks or the weirdest type of oriental orgy, it can be provided. The house offers an absolute guarantee.

My own introduction to the place was a bit different than yours would be. You see I knew one of the dames. Knew her quite well in fact. She'd been a most complaisant neighbor of mine, back home in Texas. We'd had some tremendous times together on afternoons when her husband was away. But time and company policy caused the family to move. It had been nearly eighteen months when I ran into her on the street.

We chatted. And we both agreed that each of us had only one thing on our minds. I suggested that we retire for an hour or so, up to my hotel room. She only laughed.

"Why don't you come to my place?"

"Fine," I said. "Just lead on."

Lead on she did, straight to a sleek little Thunderbird. A short drive and there we were. I wanted to comment on her striking it rich, but thought maybe I'd better not. We walked inside. One look around and I began to have some strange ideas.

"Surprised?" she asked.

"That's hardly the word for it . . . not that you're selling it, you understand," I told her, "but that that you'd be working at it in a place like this."

"I'd hardly call it work," she told me. "It's more like volunteer labor. Fun, 100% fun, and I get paid as well. What could be better? We're all like that here. Just a happy bunch who love our work."

Passion House as it's officially called—or Super Sex Villa—as it's known to its working complement is entirely staffed by what should rightfully be called amateurs. Every girl is a real, honest-to-goodness housewife, carefully recruited because of her excessive devo-ten to sex and the sexual arts. All are married to average, workaday husbands. Most have children. In their non-duty hours, they devote themselves to cleaning, dusting, marketing and all the rest of the normal household responsibilities. Each and every one of them is working at Passion House with the full permission of her husband, many with their husbands' thanks and blessing.

"We're all so over-sexed," my hostess guide told me, "that no one man can ever hope to satisfy us. It's not that we don't love our husbands with this policy. While a single man can get a basic satisfaction for as little as twenty-five dollars, the charge for the more complicated acts run up into the hundreds and for extreme combinations of couples, there is just no limit to what the cost may be.

"About a month ago a group of corporation executives and their wives paid out ten thousand apiece for an evening's entertainment," my pretty guide related. "And when it was all over, not a single member of the group claimed that he or she was cheated."

After being introduced to a number of the girls who were unoccupied at the time, I was taken on a tour of the establishment.

THE LOWER FLOOR consisted of a large entrance hall, lavishly photos of the hostesses in all stages of dress and undress and from every angle. And, once the selection had been made on this basis, the woman in charge of the room would offer further photos, if desired, showing the girl posed in each at every action of her repertoire. If the client demanded further evidence, there were large files of video tape. The client was placed before a carefully screened off TV set and could watch his choice performing whatever he might wish to see on closed circuit TV with full sound and color. Sound was provided through individual headsets so the noise would not disturb any neighboring viewer.

From this room the client could pass to private interview rooms, where, under the watchful eye of a chaperone, he could personally in-heads, but if we weren't here, we'd either be working our husbands to death or else out picking up strangers just to satisfy the inner urge."

Quite a number of the girls qualify as full-fledged nymphos, but even those who do not fall that category in the absolute medical sense are practically crazy for the pleasures of the flesh and are ready, willing and anxious for them in any way that can be suggested.

"We'll take on men, women singly, together, or in combination," I was informed. "You just tell us what you want and we'll see to it that you get it."

Naturally prices are custom-decorated in the most tasteful manner. Off to the right, a large, well lit lounge covered an entire wing of the building. There was a well stocked bar here, with bottles that held drinks from all over the world, ordinary and exotic. There were tables for those who wished to sit comfortably as well as small curtained booths for any clients who wished to drink in privacy.

To the left of the entrance hall was an equally large chamber. This, I was told, was called the "viewing and selection room." There, in racks, were pictures of the girls, a single rack for each working member. By examining each rack one could see spect the girl of his choice prior to hiring her.

One he made his selection, he was free to enjoy her company for as long as he cared to and could afford. While those purchasing the more basic services were limited strictly to one hour for fees that went over $500 there was no pretense to time limits. One could dine, drink, converse, chat with other girls or couples to one's hearts content, retiring for more private action whenever and as often as one desired. Between bouts, one could return to the more public rooms for rest, relaxation, social amenities and refreshment.

Directly to the rear of the entrance hall was an auditorium. The small hall seated about fifty, all in the most comfortable seats. Here were shown the latest and best in pornographic movies or were performed stage shows. Such acts were put on by arrangement. Individual movie shows, could of course be shown in more private surroundings, via the ever present closed TV circuits to each and every room, and of course live acts for single customers or tiny groups could be put on in the private rooms. But for larger gatherings, the auditorium was quite useful, and I was told was usually filled for some kind of show at least four or five times a week.

The back of the building on the ground floor was taken up by management offices, photo studio, dark room, storerooms, and special social rooms for those who worked in the establishment.

There were two floors above the main halls. These were reached either by staircase, escalator or two private elevators for those who preferred not to walk.

The first of these floors was filled with about two dozen large chambers. Each room contained in addition to the ever-present huge, circular bed a series of chairs, both hard and soft backed, several tables, a couch, a love seat, and hidden behind a screen a contraption that looked like a dentist's chair, with a pair of individual foot rests. This it was explained, could be raised or lowered to any height, swiveled to any angle or direction that might suit the customers needs or convenience.

In addition, the room contained another series of devices. Along the wall, alongside the bed, were six knobs. These controlled the walls. By turning them, the four walls, the ceiling and the floor, singly or in combination, could be converted into huge mirrors. Each of the panels or floorboards acted much like the panels of a Venetian blind, one side wood, plaster or decoration, the other a fine mirror. These mirrors fitted so closely that even though they were in strips, it took the most careful inspection to see where they joined together. The knobs could turn all these panels, or some of them, to almost any angle, so that a client might, if he wished, get the infinite angled views that might inspire him.

For those who wished it, music, in any rhythm, could be piped into each room.

The top floor was totally different from anything down below. Here was an area designed specifically for those with the more bizarre tastes. Not all of it was pleasant, but as the girl explained, when a customer is paying fees that high, he or she is entitled to relieve himself in any way required. I asked my lady accompanying me, sympathetically, if it all wasn't too horrible for her to describe, but she shook her head smilingly. It's all part of the game, and one gets used to it. Besides, the room is miked down to the office. It's a special mike activated only by a certain level of decibels, and that sound range has to continue for twenty seconds or more before the solenoid is tripped. That means it has to be a pretty loud and steady scream. We all practice once a day, so we know the level required. But it's good to know we can get help if it's needed and still give at least some protection to the customer's sense of privacy if it's not required."

Another room on this upper floor contained some of the most complex and mysterious machines I've ever seen. These are specialties of the house, she told me. "There are low. It's a safety feature that's unique for this establishment," she said proudly. "It's required whenever a girl entertains any stranger—even if nothing happens. For example, just being with you will mean I'll have to be checked. We take no girl's word. It's safer that way. So . . . if you've got any plans or ideas, I'd hate to waste the examination?"

I explained that while I had gotten lots of ideas, I didn't think my budget would stand the treatment I needed.

She laughed. "Well, who knows. For old time's sake maybe we can make one exception now and then. But don't make a habit of it. We're not enthusiastic about free samples. Let me check downstairs." She picked up a housephone.

"It's OK," she said a moment

Girls wait patiently in the OA's office to be questioned about set-up.

massaging machines, and special jobs for excessively fat or badly deformed people. Some of them have real problems. But we can take care of them, no matter what the problems might be."

And off on the extreme right of the building was what appeared to be a hospital room. It's our medical department. Anything that happens to anyone, guest, client or employee can be treated immediately. We have a doctor in attendance twenty-four hours a day. In addition, at the end of each visit every girl is required to go in for an examination, and a prophylaxis. Even if, by some wild chance, some client might infect a girl, she is prevented from passing the infection on to any person who might follow. "Special treatment for the press, you know. So let's go . . . or would you rather stay up on the third floor and sample some of our machinery?"

"Nothing fancy for me," I answered. "I'm an old fashioned boy—don't you remember."

"Them's the kind I like best," she cooed. "Come on downstairs. My room's just dying to have you . . ."

So now, back at the ranch, as they say, complete with some of the fondest memories of my life, all that I can add is . . . why don't they have more places like Passion House? I know it's against public policy, but still, the thought of a Super Sex Villa in every town in the country is a mighty tempting dream.

The naked girl crawled into his bed, not to love, but to set the scene for murder!

THE BIG PLAN WAS RAPE

by GROVER BRINKMAN

IT was one of those houses you occasionally see in a horror movie—gaunt, weather-beaten, paintless. It had a chilling look, augmented by the low-horizon moon and the moss-draped trees of the swamp at its back door. A pirogue drifted on rippling water nearby. Marc Dana clutched his abdomen as he stumbled out of his station wagon, headed across the barren gumbo. He had to seek help, right now, or fall flat on his face.

Instinctively he glanced through the window as he headed for the stoop. There were three people in the room—a kitchen—two men and a woman. On second glance he decided that the third person was a mere girl.

They sat at an oilcloth-covered table, eating. The man nearest him was squat, youngish looking. The second was older, perhaps forty-five, with a weather-beaten face, a hard mouth, and curly hair. The face of the girl was partly in shadow; he couldn't tell about her features, except her hair. It was the color of corn silk.

The younger man kicked back his chair, moved across the room. Marc got a better look at the other man now, and suddenly he grinned with relief. There was a tin star pinned to

His anger was mounting by the moment. "They're hunting me," he said. "That's what you wanted, isn't it? Have the deputy gun me down." He grinned. "Scream, and I'll kill you."

The members of this club, devoted to the practice of uninhibited love, claim that they have found a thrilling new lease on life!

MORE SEX FOR MODERN MEN

by J. S. MONASH

IT IS NO secret that today's young men and women enjoy far freer sex lives than any similar group in the past. The physical pleasures connected with sex have taken on a new status of a right rather than a privilege. Hardly one in a hundred over the age of 20, for example, has any intention of waiting for marriage in order to fulfill the joys and ecstasies of sexual conjunction.

But it goes even further. Married couples, especially the younger and more vigorous couples, are coming to the conclusion that there is more fun in life than merely enjoying the bodily pleasures of their single chosen mate. As a result of all this, such widely differing phenomena as planned infidelity, wife-swapping and total promiscuity have spread to an amazing degree across the nation.

Still, there remain thousands of fellows and girls with the desire but not the means to enjoy this new found fun. Let's be frank about it: not everyone is of the "high" social nature—not everyone is capable of making or even finding the wide circle of friends so necessary to a completely promiscuous life. And there are others, of a naturally reticent type, who cannot bring themselves to the open discussion of sex that is required to find among their acquaintances those who are seeking the same ends.

It is for that reason that groups are springing up especially in the large cities of the country, devoted to bridging this gap. These groups have come to the conclusion that there is a major service to be performed. And if they can manage to make a profit from their efforts, why so much the better.

The basic method that is being used is derived from the old-fashioned house of assignation. Many of you have probably not heard of that type of operation since it had almost disappeared in the United States as far as a dozen years ago. Put in its simplest terms, an assignation house was a building in which, for a fee, men and women could come to indulge in what were then called "their romances." They were distinct from houses of prostitution in that partners were not available for hire. A man brought his own woman; he could not find one in the house. That woman could be a prostitute, of course—and Continued on page 45

The UNCENSORED FACTS About Japan's GREATEST WARTIME MASS KILLER

"Smash them, smash them", screamed Adm. Yamamoto, "they're cowards", as he smacked his lips relishing thoughts of dying young men on Pearl Harbor ships!

by PHILIP ROMAINÉ

AS EARLY AS 1937, when Japan began her campaign to rule all of Asia, Isoroku Yamamoto at that time Vice-Minister of the Navy in the Japanese government, knew what had to be done.

"The United States of America must be crushed," he told a meeting of government officials.

And he knew the proper time to crush the U.S.

"Britain will be at war with Germany in a few years. She and France are appeasing Hitler now, this foolishness will catch up with them. Soon Britain will have to pull back her forces from Hong Kong and Singapore. France will be conquered by Germany, her colonies in Indo-China will be defenseless. The Netherlands will likewise fall to Hitler and the Netherlands East Indies will fall to us like an over-ripe plum, rich in tin, rubber and oil. The United States will have no one she can turn to for help in the Pacific, she will in fact dilute her strength by helping the British in the Atlantic. That is the time to strike."

And he knew exactly how to crush the Americans.

"One quick, unexpected and decisive blow can destroy the entire American fleet in the Pacific.

Then no one will oppose us."

And he thought he knew the Americans.

"If the blow is cruel, barbaric and brutal enough, if it kills enough Americans, they will not fight. Americans are soft and cowardly. They do not like long, hard wars where they must suffer. In World War I," he reminded the cabinet, "they did not come in until the final year. Before that they fought the Spanish, a quick, easy war with few casualties, that is how the Americans like their wars."

"Americans," he concluded, "are afraid to die."

By January of 1941 all the pieces in Yamamoto's diabolical jigsaw puzzle were in place except one. The Japanese had occupied Indo-China and there was no France to stop them. The British, expecting invasion of their home islands any day by the Nazis, had left only a skeleton force in the great naval bases of Singapore and Hong Kong. The Americans were tying up their merchant fleet to supply Britain, and they had committed the necessary destroyers to protect the flow of goods to the beleaguered British.

The only serious hold-out were the Dutch East Indies. The Netherlands had been crushed under the Nazi jackboot, but the courageous colonial government and small military garrison were defying the Japanese. They refused to supply them with rubber, and other strategic war materials, which the island were so rich in.

"The stupid Dutch," Yamamoto raged, "are defying us only because they believe the Americans will protect them. It is now more urgent than ever that the American presence in the Pacific be removed."

Yamamoto personally took on the task of destroying the American forces in the Pacific. He assumed the title of Commander in Chief of the Combined Imperial Japanese Fleet and in January of 1961 began laying his plans.

"The Americans," he reasoned, "are cowards but they are not stupid. They will not send their fleet in the southwest Pacific, because we may strike in the North at the Aleutians. Nor will they commit their main strength to the North because we may strike at the Philippines or the Dutch Indies or Australia."

We can expect that they will keep the bulk of their fleet at some central point until they think they know where we are going to attack."

Yamamoto decided upon the bold plan of striking in neither the North or the South, but right at the "central point" itself where the American fleet would be massed. With a cry of delight he realized where that "central point" would have to be, the only point from which the Americans could move either North or South —Hawaii, specifically, Pearl Harbor.

It was essential to Yamamoto that the Americans be kept in the dark concerning Japanese intentions. The attack on Pearl Harbor must come as a complete surprise and catch as many as possible of the naval personnel off guard, away from their guns.

Sunday December 7 was set for the striking date. Meanwhile the Japanese would train and practice every phase of the operation while the diplomats were given instructions to keep the U.S. guessing, to promise everything and deliver nothing. It was essential that the U.S. know nothing of what Japan intended to do until she had done it. By then the American Navy would be no more, thousands of casualties would have been inflicted, and the U.S. would see the hopelessness of the whole situation and give up.

Japan would then have a free hand all the way from the Philippines to San Francisco. The Pacific would be a "Japanese Lake."

When the fateful day came, Yamamoto arranged the final details of all phases of the strike, including exactly when the two peace envoys were to arrange the day's talks with the American Secretary of State. For a full month the Japanese fleet had been steaming in a devious approach to Pearl Harbor.

At the precise moment when the personnel at Pearl Harbor were most vulnerable, the planes struck. Zooming in over Diamond Head Mountain the red-balled buzzards headed directly for Battleship Row where the Sunday punch of the U.S. Pacific Fleet rode gently at anchor.

Most of the ships had only skeleton crews aboard, most of the sailors were on the beach enjoying week-end liberty. Raw, inexperienced young boys raced for guns that were not ready for firing. Ammo was safely locked up in the supply shacks and the Storekeepers were on liberty.

By the time the men had gotten over the shock and realized they were under actual attack and guns had been made ready to fire, thousands had been slaughtered.

BACK ON THE flagship of the attacking ship, Yamamoto waited for some word of the raid's progress. Finally it came, The Americans, the communique read, had been caught completely off guard. On the decks of the battleship, were groups of sailors attending church services. Closely packed, they had been decimated by strafing zeros.

The surprise had been complete, the Sunday morning unreadiness of the Americans had had its calculated effect. Japanese pilots estimated that over 4,000 Americans had died horribly in the attack. Eight battleships had been sunk or severely damaged. Hundreds of airplanes had been destroyed on the ground. Half-dressed pilots running to man them had been strafed and cut to ribbons by machine gun fire.

Hickam Field was useless, the harbor was clogged with the hulks of the eight battleships, several cruisers, and an undetermined number of destroyers, and literally hundreds of smaller, miscellaneous vessels.

Yamamoto gloated in evil triumph. Since 1937 he had been waiting for this day. America was stripped of its naval power in the Pacific. The Philippines, Wake, Guam, the Dutch East Indies could now be easily taken. There wasn't a square foot of ocean that didn't belong to the Japanese Empire. The Pacific was a Japanese Lake.

The officers gathered on the bridge of the flagship crowded around the Admiral and congratulated him on the soundness of his strategy and the success of the operation.

It is hard to imagine what his fellow officers would have thought had they known that Yamamoto's thoughts were not on strategy, tactics or anything so professional as that. Yamamoto was thinking of the helpless boys aboard the ships in Pearl Harbor. He was thinking of how they had died.

Some of them he thought, would have been trapped in the compartments far below the water line and died like drowning rats. He envisioned the looks of desperate fright on their faces as the water rose to their mouths, then covered their noses and finally filled the compartment completely.

Adm. Yamamoto, left, engineered infamous December 7th sneak attack on Hawaiian Islands, killing thousands of civilians and military personnel, as a Japanese envoy pleaded for peace in Washington. Angry fighting forces defended their country savagely, sank midget subs (center). Japanese navy, right, sails to do battle with the forces of US Admiral Nimitz.

Even today, eight years later, horrible nightmares return to torment our sad, unquiet minds!

"PLEASE HELP US... WE'RE RUNNING OUT OF AIR!"

by DURWOOD FRIEL

WE knew they were dead long before we broke through the last great heap of rock and shale and rubble blocking the collapsed tunnel.

The explosion had ripped through the mine on Tuesday. It was now Saturday. The men had been sealed into the warm, humid bowels of the mine. Even those corpses brought to the surface on Tuesday morning were beginning to decompose. The decaying flesh that lay somewhere ahead of us had been rotting for days in the lightless tomb.

The awful stench of putrefaction filtered through the heaped masses of debris and seemed to drench and permeate every clod of earth and core of rock.

We were cramped and crowded in the narrow passageway we'd carved and scooped ever deeper into the gutted mine. Our weary bodies were wet with sweat. We dug frantically, in the vain hope we might find some of the trapped men still alive.

Eight bodies were

A driving rain drenches the bodies of the victims who died of suffocation in one of the worst mine disasters of the century.

WIFE SWAP HABITS OF TYPICAL COUPLES

Wife-swapping is for relaxation. Any get-together includes it, especially among old friends. But don't count on joining the crowd until you can prove you really enjoy it!

By KATHY AND WALLACE

SOME FOLKS like golf, some like baseball. Others pass the time collecting stamps, coins and even umbrella handles. We know some folks who are dedicated radio hams; while quite a number are practically addicted to TV. We've got a hobby too. You might even call it a sport. After all, it takes plenty of muscular exercise. We go in for wife swapping. As far as we're concerned, it's the game that makes life worth while.

Now don't get us wrong. We're neither nuts nor misfits. We're just an average, ordinary American couple. Kathy is cute, but not exactly beautiful. You take the movie star looks as your criterion. Nor does Wally fit the notion of the all-American boy. So let's set the record straight. We're healthy, happy, in our thirties. Married eight years. Parents of three—one already of school age. Wally works hard for a living. Kathy puts in a full day just keeping the house in livable condition.

So, comes evening, dinner finished, dishes washed, we're in a mood for a little living. According to our notion, living spelled with three big letters . . . S. E. X!

Now we've got some friends. We've been hanging around with them for most of our lives. And in all that time there's been plenty of playing around. Maybe we were all a bit wild when we were kids. But the fact is, we never outgrew it's been share and share alike, boy and girl, man and woman, husband and wife, since we were in high school. We like it that way.

It isn't exactly a wife swap club, in the formal sense of the word. There are no officers, no rules, no actual membership list. We're just the kids who hung around together, played around together and sexed around together since way, way back. We don't need rules, because we wouldn't obey them anyway. We don't need officers because we're all just about equal. And as for membership, anyone new who tried to break into the crowd would find a hard time. They couldn't possibly share the ties of years, no matter how hard they tried.

I'm in the mood for my neighbor's wife tonight. She's delicious, she's stocked, she knows lots of tricks and can make me pant. My wife's great, but it's that got with me. I need a little spice; my wife's welcome. Her husband

As an achievement he had worked hard to become proficient in Karate, the Japanese art of hand-to-hand combat. Many of the Karate techniques are fatal and he had paid special attention to those. For a mind in the grip of his madness, it was the height of perversity to personally cause and witness the death of a human being, the slower and more painful the better.

He was just fifteen when he took his first victim. He had challenged a fellow Karate student, a boy two years younger and not as far along as he, to a match to be held in private. The Japanese code of honor naturally prevented the lad from doing the sensible thing, and refusing the challenge from a senior student.

The two met in an isolated spot and within minutes Yamamoto had crippled his opponent. He describes the incident vividly in his journal.

"Several of Nomura's ribs had been broken in the fall. His knee, where I had kicked him, was shattered. He moaned miserably while virtual oceans of blood poured from his mouth, his nose and even from his eye sockets. I surmised that a rib had pierced his lung and every time he breathed he expelled great volumes of blood.

"Then a hideous rattle came from his throat, his eyes looked piteously up to me for help—but there was nothing I could do. I was transfixed by the sight. I saw the body stiffen as life went slowly out of it. Then it was still and cold, and the eyes were still staring at me in that bleeding fashion."

Knowledge of this aspect of Yamamoto's personality explains many of his actions that seemed incomprehensible to his fellow officers. The Captain of a Japanese battleship which Yamamoto had chosen as his flagship during an operation testified that having the Admiral on board was a humiliating experience. He insisted on doing himself many of the menial jobs that were ordinarily performed by Ensigns and Lieutenants—such as the interrogation and torture of prisoners.

The Jap Captain remembers with particular bitterness the day an American submarine was forced to the surface by a barrage of depth charges. As soon as the sub was awash, the guns of the battleship destroyed it. Eight survivors were picked up by the Japs and held Yamamoto insisted on conducting the interrogation himself. The embarrassed Captain was forced to accompany him down to the brig, not daring to remind Yamamoto that this sort of thing was usually done by lower ranking officers. What's good enough for the Admiral is good enough for a Captain in any nation's Navy.

As the two officers tramped down the narrow companionway to where the Americans were being held, the Captain said Yamamoto began to perspire in anticipation of the feast that waited for him. They turned the final corner and found the eight American sailors, each leashed to a stanchion.

YAMAMOTO STOOD still for a moment looking them over, then without turning his head to anyone in particular, he said:

"Bring me a whip." The Captain was amazed that the Admiral himself would do the flogging when there were plenty of lesser men present who could do the actual work if he gave the order. But there was nothing he could do. He nodded to one of the enlisted men who went to a locker and brought out a whip.

Yamamoto gripped the whip handle tightly and strode over to the first American, a thin, rangy boy no more than nineteen. The Jag took a step backward and raised his right arm behind his head. There was a harsh whistle as the lash split the air, followed by the harsh smack as leather sliced into the tender flesh of the young sailor. The boy's shirt was torn from his body and a long strip of blood appeared on his chest. The next lash tore away the sailor's cheek and lips. Again the whip cut the air. It struck with a liquid slap and wrapped itself around the boy's throat six times.

The sailor's head sagged crazily and gallons of blood shot across the compartment from the severed jugular. There was the briefest of shrieks that bubbled up from the man in the throat and then silence.

The Jap sailors were paralyzed at the strange sight of the Admiral himself splattered with blood while the head of the sailor hang by a single thread of flesh from the slumped body.

Yamamoto threw aside his whip, drew his sword and approached his next victim. Again he paused to study the face of the grizzled Chief Jim's Mate in front of him.

The Chief boldly returned the stare of the demented Jap. Knowing he was as good as dead, the Chief feared nothing.

"You crary Jap bastard," he spat, "You'll never. . ." The Chief never finished his sentences. The enraged Yamamoto leaned heavily on his sword, driving it completely through the chief's body. Stopping only for a gulp of air, he pulled back on the hilt and extracted the bloody blade, dragging slimy loops of intestine with it.

By now the remaining six prisoners had no doubts as to their fate. They sat down with a hellish dis-

If you can draw fairly well

(but still not good enough)

...we'll turn you into a real artist

There are thousands of people who have been drawing better than average ever since they were in grade school...but who never improve. They're "stuck" on the same plateau of amateur skill. They keep repeating the same mistakes.

And it's a shame too, because with proper professional guidance they could develop real professional skill, and start getting well paid part-time or full-time for enjoying themselves in art.

If you're one of these people, we'd like to hear from you. For 55 years we've been teaching people like you to draw and paint with professional skill. And because we teach entirely by mail, you don't have to leave your job or family to attend classes. You learn right at home in your spare time.

Our course gives you solid training in all facets of both drawing and painting. You become equipped to go wherever you want in art—whether it's into landscape painting, advertising layout work, fashion illustration, or whatever.

Our lessons show you step-by-step what to do. Then as you complete each assignment, you mail it in to us for professional appraisal. Your instructor uses transparent overlays (see example above) to show exactly where you went wrong and how to improve your art.

To learn more about our course and the success of WSA students, send for our free booklet. We'll also send you two free art lessons.

Young men and women Discover how you can save yourself from the heartaches that come from THINNING HAIR

HAIR-THIC happened to you yet, the heartache of thinning hair? You know the signs: receding hair line, too many loose hairs in your comb, even some thin spots at your "widow's peak" or a balding at the crown of your head. It's distressing. But even worse is the fact that others may have begun to notice, too.

"Gosh, I really thought he was too old for me."

How many times has that been said about you behind your back? How sad when a young face "ages" beyond truth due to thinning hair, a receding hair line or easy-to-spot bald spots. cursing Yamamoto, the Jap Navy, the Emperor, and everything connected with Japan. It was a futile gesture but for men who are about to die, there is a grim satisfaction in going to death defiantly, having asked for no mercy from beasts.

Alarmed at the disturbance, the guards tightened their grips on their rifles. Some took a cautious step toward the Americans. But Yamamoto seemed pleased at the racket. He raised his sword high, a sick smile smeared itself across his devil-face and he moved toward the next prisoner.

Using the point of his Samurai sword, he extracted the man's eye, letting it fall to the deck like a blob of green jelly. Moving on to the next man, he neatly sliced off a hand with a single stroke of the blade. Then on to the third and the fourth, the blade slicing and flashing until all six had been maimed.

The mad Jap went back to the first and started the whole grisly round over again. Each time the blade moved, a new geyser of blood appeared. It took over forty minutes before the last prisoner was dead, so ingeniously did he wield the sword aiming for maximum pain before death released the Americans.

When the last one had died, Yamamoto, his uniform covered with blood and gobbets of flesh, paused. His breath was coming in short, exhausted gasps and his eyes had the glazed look of the narcotic addict. The scene in the compartment was a horror of death and corruption. Chunks of muscle and gore floated in pools of blood. Disembodied organs littered the deck while sightless heads stared up at the blank faces of the guards.

The whole incident had been too much for the commander of the ship. He had long since retched up his guts and was passed out in the corner. He had been fighting a war for over five years and was certainly no stranger to death and blood, but the sight of Yamamoto demeaning himself, his rank of Admiral, and the whole Imperial Navy in such a senseless orgy was too much for him.

The silence was broken suddenly as Yamamoto croaked to the guards.

"Bring me more. Soon. Capture some more Americans, please."

"Aye aye, Admiral," the Lieutenant answered wondering where in hell he was going to get them. Americans had long since learned not to surrender to the Japanese if they could avoid it. They preferred to do their dying while manning a gun.

The blood-soaked Admiral of the Combined Fleet, turned, let his sword clang to the deck and walked out, leaving the guards and the Lieutenant in a stunned silence, are high, however, each participant shelling out either five dollars an hour—or a flat fifteen dollars for a full night's occupancy. Since, as far as the club is concerned all room fees are doubled (since both man and woman pay equal fees) the returns are quite handsome.

For that fee, the couple receives a clean room, double bed, clean linen and such other equipment as may be required for occupancy period.

One club in the midwest, for example, has purchased a thirty room house. With one room taken up by the office, and the large living room used as a reception room (the old kitchen of the building has been converted to a laundry)—there are twenty-seven rooms available for daily rent. Over the past four months they have reported a better than 90% occupancy rate.

THIS CLUB has better than six hundred listed members in its registry. The list is still a bit heavy on the male side on about a three to two ratio. But compared to what a similar list would have been even ten years ago—probably four to one male—the changes in morality are only too obvious. Women seem less inhibited about registering for the service. And while club statisticians hold out no real hope that there will be a complete equality of the sexes within the foreseeable future, they do feel that within a year the balance may improve to something near a four to three ratio.

At present there is no problem for girls. They can get all the sex service they desire as often as they please. Males usually have to wait—sometimes in extreme cases—as long as a week; but usually anywhere from three to four days. Longer waits are normally for newest members, who are only given their first dates after all older registrants have been taken care of for the period.

Of course the clubs dare not advertise. New members are obtained by word of mouth only, and even then only on the direct recommendation of existing members. Otherwise it would be far too easy for the group to be infiltrated by those adamantly opposed to freedom of sexual activity.

There is naturally no guarantee that any fellow is going to get a dream girl as a casual partner—nor that any girl will find her temporary lover to be the answer to her prayer. All that is promised is that they will be male and female, ready, willing—even anxious to take part.

Still that doesn't seem to bother the members, though on rare occasions some new member may complain, or some older member may feel that the selected partner is just not to his or her liking. Generally, however, participants are philosophically prepared to take what they

"Now, I've got nothing against houses. They serve their purpose.
You can talk all you want to about morals, but a stranger in town can't keep happy on words. Still, a promise is only half pleasure. You don't care about her, she doesn't care about you. It's all business. And it's as fast as she can make it.

"The club is a step upward in the right direction. The main thing is that the girls aren't pros. They're there for exactly the same reason that you are. They want fun and kicks too.
So you take some real pains with them. You know you can bring them up to heaven if you try. It makes it more fun when you know you're giving the girl a treat instead of merely a fee.

"I know some of the guys complain that they're not getting ravishing beauties. But what are they complaining about? How many whorls are beautiful? I can answer that for you. None of them. The best prostitute
I've ever met was just passable.
In looks, every girl is at least as good as the pay-girls, and ninety percent are one hell of a lot better.

"But the most important thing is they try. They want to have fun. They want me to have fun. It's a real duel instead of just a solo event."

OBVIOUSLY, the greatest danger to the average member are the unknown sadists who might attempt to take advantage of their partners. The man or woman who dotes on dealing out pain could become a real threat to the very existence of the organization. Naturally, no member wants to be hurt or be injured while attending for the sake of ordinary types of sex pleasure.

The sponsors of the society recognize that there are pain lovers in both sexes, those who enjoy receiving pain as well as dishing it out. And they make every effort to pair up fellows and girls of a similar bent.

But any member who harms another during the course of a sex session is dealt with in the most severe manner. Every potential member is specifically warned of the penalties upon joining. And a watch is kept at all times for breaches of the regulations. Hallways are constantly patrolled and any screams or other indications of sadistic behavior are immediately investigated.
So too are any member complaints.
To date, the midwestern club has had only one single such incident. And if it is possible, it is hoped that that will be the last one.

The members themselves back up the club officers 100% in this regard.
They value what they receive from it too much to risk any public scandal.
To most of them, the ordinary sex activities are more than sufficient.
After all, the club lists more than one hundred different types of sex methods that any ordinary couple can enjoy. And to help those members whose knowledge or imaginations are limited, the club of course keeps a complete file of possibilities, illustrated, diagrammed and fully explained in simple English.

This particular club does not branch out into the related fields of providing sex pictures, books or movies to its members, though it is rumored that a similar organization on the west coast has been profiting from these additional sources of revenue.

"We are a service organization, nothing more," one of the officers told me. "We provide space and listings. That's all. And as far as we're concerned, it's more than enough. You don't know how complex it is just keeping up the society. Building maintenance alone is a major chore and when you add to it the business of just keeping up the membership and pairing off applications, it's not only a full day's work, but double day. To add sidelines would be just adding more problems. If other groups want to get into it, that's their business. As far as we're concerned, no, thanks."

As of the present writing, there are only a few similar societies currently operating in the United States. Even with the full cooperation of the officers and members of the midwestern group we've been describing, we could only locate eight others.

Thus, figuring that the memberships of these other groups was at the same level, only between five and six thousand people are being serviced by them. Obviously, this is such a tiny percentage of the population as to be practically indescribable.

Nor is there any indication that growth will be rapid or widespread. For even if the number of groups were to double in the next year, it would still be a lot less than a drop in the bucket.

How much demand there is for such units is debatable. It's all very well to say that a great many men and women are looking for such service. But the big question is, would they actually put down their names and pay out their cash to use it?

On the other hand, perhaps it is a step too far in the direction of absolute sex freedom. Certainly many moralists and public figures would say so. And quite possibly, they speak for the bulk of the population.

Unlike prostitution, this type of organization depends on the cooperation of both sexes. And even in these days of free decision, there is a hesitancy.

Still, as far as those that do operate successfully today, there does seem to be the necessary membership. On a restricted basis, they have found both men and women in sufficient numbers to work out their prob-

Shamed by your English?

You can soon speak and write like a college graduate if you let me help you for 15 minutes a day.

LET'S BE FRANK

If you've ever been shamed by a mistake in English, maybe I can save you from years of disappointment.

You see, none of us will ever go any farther than our ability to speak and write will let us go.

I have met countless numbers of intelligent men and women who are being held back in their jobs and social lives—often without knowing it—because they couldn't express themselves fully and easily.

What About You?

Could you get ahead faster with a command of good English? Just ask yourself these questions:

Even with all your ability and ambition, how long has it been since you had a promotion?

Even with all you have to offer, what people get together at work or at parties, are you the one they listen to?

Be Honest with Yourself

If people are not impressed by the way you speak and write—and, if you're honest enough with yourself to admit it—you have already taken the first big step to success.

The Next Step Is Easy

You can master good English without going back to school. Over the years I have helped thousands of men and women to stop making embarrassing mistakes in English, increase their vocabularies, and become interesting conversationalists—right in their own homes.

Here's What to Do

I can help you, too, if you will give 15 minutes a day to the Career Institute Method of mastering good English. My answers to the following questions will show you how quickly and easily you can stop being ashamed of your English, and do something about getting ahead.

Question What is so important about my ability to speak and write?

Answer People judge you by the way you speak and write. Good English is absolutely necessary for making a good impression and getting ahead in business and social life. You can't express your ideas fully or reveal your true personality without a sure command of good English.

Question What does a "command of good English" mean?

Answer It means you can express yourself clearly and easily without fear of embarrassment or making mistakes. It means you can write well, carry on a good conversation—also read rapidly and remember what you read.

Question Are there other advantages to be gained by acquiring a command of good English?

Answer Yes! Words are actually "tools of thought." The more you learn about words and how to use them to form and express your ideas, the better your thinking becomes. For this reason a command of good English often pays off in unexpected ways.

Question Wouldn't I have to go back to school for a command of good English?

Answer No, not any more. You can gain the ability to speak and write like a college graduate right in your own home—in only a few minutes each day.

Question Is this something new?

Answer Career Institute of Chicago has been helping people for many years. The unique Career Institute Method quickly shows you how to stop making embarrassing mistakes, gain a colorful vocabulary, write clearly and well, and discover the "secrets" of interesting conversation.

Question How do I know it works?

Answer There are thousands of letters in my files, testimonials from people in all walks of life who have used the proved Career Institute Method to achieve amazing results. If you send in the coupon below, I will share some of these letters with you.

Question How long will it take me to learn to speak and write like a college graduate, using your method?

Answer In some cases people take only a few weeks to gain a command of good English. Others take longer. It is up to you to set your own pace. In a little time as 15 minutes a day, you will see quick results.

Question How can I find out more about the Career Institute Method?

Answer I will gladly mail you a free 32-page booklet which explains the new easy-to-follow Career Institute Method and tells how you can master good English quickly and enjoyably at home. Send coupon, card or letter today to Career Institute, Dept. 270-24, 555 E. LaSalle St., Mundelein, Illinois 60060. No salesman will call.

can live up the show.

The parties are just made to order for photo sessions. We can wander about, between our own sessions, shooting the most marvelous scenes. And since everyone is aware of our little eccentricity, no one minds in the least. And later on, we're always willing to give away prints of our artistry.

We've got a pretty complete photo lab in our basement and can handle almost anything on film. We can even do reels with sound.

Every once in a while, we give complete shows for our friends. A show might run as much as three hours. They all enjoy it, because they know that somewhere in the course of the viewing, each of them will see themselves. Why just listening to the comments is practically a show in itself.

Where we go in for pictures, another member of the gang collects books. She's got a fabulous collection, stuff from all over the world. The library in her home holds not only the great classics of sex, but some of the really wild material, the kind of thing most people never heard about. There are books in French, German, Turkish, Italian, Japanese, Indian and even Russian. Some of them, the Russian ones, go back to the days of the Czars. One would hardly believe that Russians could be so crude.

They also have some really old ones, volumes that go back hundreds of years, with handdrawn and hand-painted illustrations. Some of them would probably be fantastically valuable, if they could only be auctioned off on the open market. At any rate, it proves that there isn't really so very much that's new in the world. It seems that most everything to do with sex has been tried before, hundreds and hundreds of times over. We'd guess that if there were any books or pictures from ancient Egypt, it would be all the same thing.

We met a couple once, we swapped a few times with them, and they showed us their collection of sexy bric-a-brac: statuettes, dolls, models and toys. There was some remarkable stuff, too. Many were "working models," pairs, trios and quartettes of dolls that actually did everything you could want to see. All you had to do was wind them up and off they'd go. One of them was attached to a music box and performed to the sweetest little tune. Wish we could write music. The tune went perfectly with sex.

You know, after you've been swapping for a while, you reach a point where you begin to think you've tried everything there is. You begin to wonder if the rest of your life is going to be spent in merely repeating things you've already done. But in spite of all your fears, it never quite works out that way.

That's a big advantage of being part of a crowd. There's always someone who comes up with a new thought. Sometimes it's only a little variation on an old trick. But still, it's a new departure. And the first thing you know, one thing leads to another and you're doing an action you'd never have believed was possible, only a week before. By now we're behaving in ways that we could never have imagined at the beginning.

A question we're always asked by newcomers to the game is, "Doesn't Wally find that ultimately one woman is like another; and doesn't Kathy feel that one fellow is hardly a change from another?"

Well, it is partly true. Folks who have been swapping with each other for a long time do tend to pick up the habits and techniques of the joining couple. But it's never exactly the same. Luckily people are different. They have different coordination, different timing, difference ability and most important of all, different looks.

They are of all varieties, shapes, sizes and ages. There are blonds, brunettes, redheads; there are fat ones and thin ones. The girls have different figures and proportions and the men are of as many types as the girls. Sometimes you find yourselves going by choice with someone who you would ordinarily consider downright ugly or unattractive, just because it makes for the kind of change that gives new kicks to living. One of the girls in the crowd is as flat as a board, but she doesn't lack opportunities, for just that reason.

Somehow, it's extra special to be with someone completely different from one's own mate. Sure, you always come back to the type you like best, but for short term swap dates, it doesn't matter in the least. Wally had the time of his life with a woman a good twenty years older than he was. And Kathy never complained about the hours she spent with the woman's husband. This isn't meant to prove anything. It just shows what a wide selection of pleasure is available.

How does one get into swapping? It's difficult to say. We've met hundreds and hundreds of couples, in addition to our regular crowd, and there doesn't seem any set method.

One has to want to pretty hard. I've never heard of a couple that was talked into it, or lured into it. Usually they've thought about it for a long time before they decided to take the plunge. Mostly, they're of a type that would be unfaithful even if they weren't swapping. And all of them have to be pretty keen on sex from all angles.

I've heard stories about couples in which one party wanted to swap and the other didn't. It didn't work. All that happened was that they made a mess of their lives. More often than not, a situation like that would end in divorce, which is never good, no matter how many people make use of it.

For those couples where both want to swap very much, it's a matter of keep trying. Some never succeed. Many do. It's just luck, we guess. You either connect or you don't. If you try long enough, you usually win out. But remember, for the most part, swappers are a suspicious lot. They want to be awfully sure of new couples before they trust them

There are an awful lot of swappers in America. It's a growing hobby. But it's a hobby only for the man's shirt on the top left side.

The girl turned out of the shadow, and despite the pain retching his stomach, Marc felt his eyes widen. She had a Madonna-like face, almost classic. Perhaps it was the old light, Marc told himself, as he knocked at the door.

He heard footsteps come forward, then the door swung open and the younger man's face stared at him. Matted hair hung over his forehead; his gimlet eyes were red-rimmed, his mouth hard.

"Hello!" Marc said. "I'm in—and need help."

The man just stared. Then he twisted his head to call over his shoulder: "Harps, come here!"

Marc stood there, the pain as acute he gritted his teeth. Footsteps sounded again, then the man with the star swung the door wider.

"What's wrong, mister? Someone about you?"

Marc shook his head, negatively. "Ate some bad food."

He clutched at the door-frame to keep from falling. The man still stared at him, face expressionless. He seemed to be deliberating about something. His gaze traveled up and down his form. He picked his teeth with a match.

"Look!" Marc blurted out finally. "I've got to have a bed—or I'll fall flat on my face."

The man's eyes slowly changed; there was a sudden satisfied glint in them. The hard mouth cracked in a grin.

"Fetch him in, Duke!" he said. "Well, me if Judy's got a bed for him."

Marc felt hard hands under his shoulders. He was propelled inside. The smell of Duke's unwashed body added to his nausea. They slid him into a chair and the man with the star opened a door and shouted: "Judy!"

He heard the click of heels on bare boards. Then the girl came into the room, stood there, staring at him. He wasn't much over seventeen, he decided. She was slim, willowy, muscular. Close-up, her face still was beautiful, except for a hardness about her mouth.

"This city fellow's sick," Harps told the girl. "Ask your grandma if she's got a bed for him."

Harps left the room, came back presently with a bottle of colorless liquid. "Take a snort of this!" he said. "It's generally good for belly-ache."

Marc looked at the bottle, hesitated. "I'd better not."

The bottle was pushed in his hand. "Take a snort, mister!"

Marc took the bottle, raised it. The liquor was fire, coasting to his churning stomach.

"Take another one," the star said. "Feels good, don't it?"

Marc nodded. He didn't know if it felt good or if he was dying.

"Where'd you come from, mister?" Harps asked.

"I'm a telephone engineer," Marc explained. "Going to Miami. Ate some chicken salad back up the road—must have been contaminated. I took the first cut-off, hunting for a town."

"Wondered how you got down here. Harps's voice was a bit more friendly now.

"Are you the sheriff?" Marc asked, studying the hard face.

"Naw, just a deputy. Harps Mayfield Duke's my brother."

The girl came back into the room presently, pushing a woman in a wheel chair. She was old—possibly seventy. Her hair was snowy, her thin face lined. Only her dark eyes seemed to be alive.

"What'll you pay for a room?" she finally shot at him.

Marc raised his troubled eyes. "TU pay—any decent price—if I can just have a bed—"

"Five dollars—now!" the woman said, snarling.

Marc got his wallet. "TU give you ten. Just let me get to bed and find a doctor."

"Ain't no doc in town," the woman said. "Reckon we can't send one for what's ails you."

A skinny man snaked out and took the bill. Marc returned the wallet to his pocket, realizing he had been foolish.

He let the two men lead him into another room. It was a bedroom, dimly-lighted by an oil lamp on a small table. The bed was an old four-poster. Already the two men were stripping off his clothes. Marc was too sick to care what they did to his tailor-made suit. Down to his shorts, they slid him between the covers. He closed his eyes in relief. If he ever lived to be a hundred, he would always remember this moment: his need for a bed.

THE man left the room, and Marc realized vaguely that the girl came in, started picking up his clothes. She came up to the bed, placed a hand on his forehead.

"You got a fever, mister! Fashion grandma can fix that!"

It was the first friendly word he heard since he had asked for help.

"The deputy and his brother—"

"They just heard here," she cut in. "Grandma and me live here—alone."

"You've given me four own room, haven't you?"

"It don't matter," she headed for the door. "Grandma'll know you come too—reason it'll help you, too, and."

She was gone. He lay there, trying to figure out the problems suddenly bothering him. He didn't like this. The howl-like wharpoons in the eyes of the man. The old woman with the straight face. The girl, evanescent, with hardness etched on her mouth—

Once he got rid of the reaching thrusts in his abdomen, he'd get out of here in a hurry, before he got rubbed. He wished, now, that he didn't have that stuffed wallet.

He cussed off, only to be awakened by the old woman. She had wheeled her chair alongside his bed. The girl held a vessel.

"Feed him the tea, Jody!" the old woman said.

He protested. "I really won't need it. That whiskey—"

"Just take the tea, mister—"

The girl bent over him, pulling him to an upright position. He could feel her body through the thin dress. She smelled of some cheap perfume.

She started in again some hot liquid into his mouth. More swallow of it reluctantly, wondering whether he was drinking some witcher's potion. It had a sweetish taste, pungent, with a ginger twang. She thrust aimed on fire.

He protested, but she kept spooning the peppery stuff into his mouth. He kept swallowing automatically, against his will. At last it was gone; he was back on the pillow. The girl bent over him again, hovered there.

Sleepy. He was so sleepy he didn't care about anything. The wheel-chair moved away, then the girl was gone, too. Minutes later—or perhaps it was hours—he knew someone was in the room, but he was so drugged with sleep he couldn't squeeze open an eye. He heard voices—

"Her's out like a light," a man's voice said.

"Nice lookin' feller, Harpe—"

"Just fancy clothes—"

"His real good-lookin'. It's good a crime—"

Harpe cursed. "Quit guttin' out, Jody. I got this all worked out—don't you got to do your part—"

"Sure, I'll do my part," the girl said.

"You'd better—if you know what's good for you!"

The voices drifted away. They were so unreal, only his superhuman mind had recorded them.

THINK was a man in the room again, and this time he came awake in a hurry. Whatever was in the tea, the effect had worn off. His abdomen was still sore, but he felt better. Old granny's magic tea! He'd heard about some of these remedies—roots, herbs, concoctions handed down from the time of the pharaohs.

He was wide awake now, and suddenly he realized someone was moving near him. He looked up in awe at the girl at his bed.

She still was seated in the house dress. Now he saw her pull the dress over her head. She wore nothing under it. She stood there, inches from his face. He felt the warm woman-smell of her, and suddenly she bent low, and her lips were on his, pressing hard.

He tried to squirm away, but her arms were tight about his neck. She was breathing fast—

For a moment, the temptation was overwhelming. He was relaxed, just awakened from a refreshing sleep, and here a young girl offered herself to him in the primitive fashion of a love-starved neurotic, buried in this meat-hole.

Why not? Her lips were seeking his now, and her fingers were clawing his bare back.

For just an instant he gave in, scratched her mouth. And then suddenly he was cold, weak, frightened. Those voices he had heard in the dream world of his pain! Someone—a man—talking to this very girl, whipping up a scheme—

It came to him quickly now, and the answer was plainly obvious. Pin a rap on him! They had seen his wallet. Perhaps he carried more money in that wallet than those swampons earned in a year. It was there, for the taking. But first there must be a reason, a motive. Harpe was a deputy; he was using the girl to provide the motive.

Crawl in bed with this filthy bitch! Make love to him. Then scream! We'll be waiting outside, and we'll make short work of this guy with the fat wallet. Rape is a nasty word. Every day, fellows get killed for rape.

That had to be it. Suddenly he was cold, but his mind was alert, calm. Her lips were hot on his own now, and he waited for that moment he knew would come.

His hands roamed her body, and sudden he felt her stiffen. Her mouth pulled away. She pulled in a lungful of air for that first mad scream that would send them inside—

He clipped her on the chin so hard that her head flew back, thumping against the headboard. She moaned, stretched out. For an instant he sat there, staring at her young, unbed beauty.

Then he was out of bed, arranging for his clothes. He thought first of the window, discounted that idea even as it was born. They would be out there, in front of the beam.

He remembered as he came up, the glow of a picture sticking up from the mud. That might be his only hope.

He started for the door, hoping to gain the rear of the house. He gave one last look at the girl, still prone on the bed. He started through the door, then came back. He picked up the house dress, got the unconscious girl in a sitting position, and pulled the dress over her head. The first time he had it backward. He heard shaking. He finally got it over her head. He slipped it down, finally shouldered the girl, headed for the door.

In the kitchen he turned long enough to peer out one of the darkened windows. Nothing but the moonlight shined outside. Could he be wrong—could this be pure imagination? Then he saw a cigarette glow, near his ear. They were out there, like a wolf pack.

A hand cracked as he explored a long, barren hallway. There was a door at its end. He eased it open, wondering whether it would be safe. The shadows were deep here; still he lingered.

Then the screen came. Not from the girl on his shoulder, but from the old woman in the wheel chair. He was outside now, warming away from the house, hugging the shadows. He heard the shout of men. He worked toward the bayou. He had the girl safe in the fragrant now—they were pushing out into the light stream. He gasped! Thank heaven there were no dogs!

He was out of sight of the house now, following the black shore line. The girl stirred at his feet, and he reached down, pulled her up beside him. She was awake now, confused. He held a hand over her mouth.

"You tried to kill me!" he said harshly. "Listen—hear them back at the house! They're hunting me. You were going to help rape, weren't you? Have the deputy gun me down. Then you could split my wallet."

His anger was mounting by the moment. He stared into her wide-open eyes, his voice harsh. His hand left her mouth presently, moved down to her throat. "Shut up, and I'll kill you."

She just stared at him, her lips trembling.

"Why'd you do it?" he asked, his anger still a livid thing. "You—a nice-looking girl—beautiful young—"

She still stared at him, eyes narrowed. Then suddenly she was crying. She was crying like a little girl, from the bottom of her heart. It wasn't a sham. He knew that instinctively. This kid was tearing her heart out. It melted his anger a bit, but still he sat there, holding his hand at her throat.

And finally she told him the whole miserable story. He was right—had partly right. She was pregnant. She was to crawl in bed with him, then at the proper moment scream. And they would come in, drag him outside. They would kill him—the father of her unborn child, worse a stigma. The fat wallet was a bonus.

She was holding tight to him, in near hysteria. And somehow the anger drained out of him.

"Think! Plan! He could still entice them. Or could he?"

He heard them now, fanning out behind the house.

"That's gone!" a gruff voice shouted.

"We've got to strike back," he said. "They know we're on the bayou. They'll come this way—"

Her hands pressed his now, her eyes pleading. "I'll show you."

"We've got to get back to my car!"

They reached the pigpen, and he drew it up into a clump of weeds. She took his hand. They started to run. As they ran, he told her, of his plan. It was the only chance they had.

"There's recording equipment in the station wagon," he said. "The finest short-wave radio, a public address system. If we can get to the station wagon—"

Still led him through all types of terrain. They could hear the men; once there were several shots. Then the moon banked behind a cloud fringe. They hunkered down near the highway, within sight of the station wagon. It seemed quiet at the house; the men were further down the bayou.

Someone shouted: "The bastard left the boat. Here it is!"

There wouldn't be much time to waste, he realized that. She took his hand and they sprinted for the station wagon. Now they were inside, hunkered down. No one could see them. He knew the position of every instrument by heart.

He told her what to say. "Speak slowly, right into the mike." He started to tape. And finally he was ready for the scorching pose.

He turned on the station wagon's light, swung the spotlight until it bathed the bayou. Then he turned up the control, and music blasted into the night.

"They'll be coming," he told her, and smiled. His face was white, grim. She looked so pitiful, a half-woman, half-girl, huddled there. He kissed her, and her lips were warm and responsive. For just an instant she clung to him.

He raised his hand, until he could see the bayou. "Here they come!" he said at last. "Now keep down!"

There were nine in them, he saw, making a quick count. The deputy had a shotgun, so did Duke. Two had rifles. They looked rough and ready—a typical Lynch mob, fanned into sudden action, tempers flaring. They were meeting the truck now, spread-
